One monkey stares and listens with mocking disdain, the other seems to be dreaming away—but when it's clear I don't know what to say he prompts me with a gentle clinking of his chain.

from: Wisawa Szymborska's Poem Brueghel's Two Monkeys

"Fools are everywhere. But are the fools of today the same as the fools of yesteryear?"

2024; graphite on paper, tape;

Motif after Two Chained Monkeys (1562) by Bruegel the Elder, drawn by Sanie Irsay
