Opening: 14 May, 2026, 12 pm

Some day there may be a gift in front of your door. The present may not come with a bow. You are not surprised, nothing has ever surprised you. “I wasn’t wishing for anything” you may say to yourself, but you damn well know that isn’t true. If only someone had warned you, but there are things you just need to do out of curiosity, against all better judgement.

Some day there will be a gift inside of your room. The present will not come with a bow. This is not what you were wishing for. Something new in a space you’ve always known. It’s not that it’s dishonest, it’s just that you loathe reality. Probably better to keep it in view. To watch it like a dog. Get in real close. Why do these things always happen at night?

Maybe a horse is not so bad after all, not even a Trojan one.
The world in there could be a better one.

This exhibition is part of the book launch of Annual Report #1, chronicling the first season of exhibitions at the people – a venue for contemporary art interested in the intimate. It was founded by Jonathan Blaschke in autumn of 2024. It does not own a liquor license. BarGum owns a liquor license and is also interested in the intimate. But in a different way.
